Participants in this workshop are encouraged to take an active part in the teacher evaluation process as a professional growth opportunity. Reflecting on the many varied and complex components of the profession, gathering artifacts and documentation to illustrate their contribution, helps to facilitate and inform a professional dialogue between teachers and administrators. Participants will learn how to build a professional portfolio, based on the Danielson framework, that can be used for evaluations, post-observation conferences and promotion interviews. With professional data, the observation and evaluation conferences should be done with teachers - not to them.
